Life in Ancient Egypt - Daily Life

Life in Ancient Egypt was hard and most people didn't live very long. Children were very important. Only boys whose fathers were rich went to school. All boys did the same job as their fathers. Most men worked as farmers or craftsmen. Girls learned how to cook and look after the home.

Houses were made of bricks. Workers' houses usually had two rooms. People and animals lived together. The houses had small windows that let in very little light. People often cooked and spent most of their time on the flat roofs. Rich people's houses had high ceilings and tiled floors as well as pools and gardens.

People worked hard, but they always made time to relax. Children played with toys such as carved animals, wooden horses and balls. Egyptians liked to play board games. They also loved music and dancing. The River Nile was another source of entertainment and everyone went fishing and boating on it.

1. Who could go to school in Ancient Egypt?

Zadanie 1. Przeczytaj tekst i odpowiedz na pytania. Odpowiedz pełnymi zdaniami.

By Ann

I'm still at school and I don't know what I'm going to do for a career. Last winter I got a job in a clothes shop. It wasn't a full-time job. I only wanted to work on Mondays and Thursdays so that I could spend time with my friends. The manager gave me a bit of training on my first day but after that I was on my own, although I didn't have to run the whole shop. I was just in charge of the jeans department. I was good at my job and I got on well with the customers, so I asked for a pay rise. He wasn't paying me nearly enough! But he refused, so a week later I gave in my notice. After that I was unemployed till I went back to school. But I wasn't worried because I had earned enough money to go out every evening with my friends.

1. Why didn't Ann want a full-time job?
2. How many days a week did she work?
